The coronavirus pandemic and consequent stay-at-home and other physical distancing measures have increased danger for those at risk for or experiencing family violence. Shifting non-emergent health encounters to telehealth platforms offers unique opportunities to provide trauma-informed care and to connect in new ways with adults and children who may be experiencing abuse. Telehealth and virtual visits also present new challenges related to privacy, safety and digital health equity.

This National Health Collaborative on Violence and Abuse (NHCVA) webinar will:

1. Examine challenges, opportunities and guiding principles for telehealth and other virtual visits through an equity and trauma-informed perspective;
2. Highlight inequities in digital health tools and opportunities to apply an equity framework in an era of expanded patient access to data and care;
3. Describe a clinical provider's experiences around transitioning to telehealth visits; and
4. Introduce resources that can guide optimal approaches to promote safety and well-being through virtual visits.

Presenters:

Dayna Long, MD, FAAP, Pediatrician and Director, Center for Child and Community Health, UCSF Benioff Children's Hospital Oakland;

Jorge A. Rodriguez, MD, Clinician and Investigator at the Brigham and Women's Hospital, Boston MA

Lisa James, MA, Director of Health, Futures Without Violence and NHCVA Member

Facilitated by: Elaine Alpert, MD, MPH, Massachusetts Medical Society and NHCVA Member
